Milo Adventures • Book 5

Milo knew the path to Willow Meadow by heart: past the mill, over the little bridge, and beside the stream. Today, he and Grandma were bringing a picnic to watch the swallows.

He packed cheese, pears, and a red blanket in his green bag. Grandma carried a map, even though Milo laughed. “We know the way!” he said. “Maps are useful when a way changes,” she answered.

They reached the stream and stopped. A wooden sign stood before the bridge: CLOSED FOR REPAIR. One plank had lifted after the rain. Milo stared at the meadow on the other side.
